READY FOR THE INAUGURATION.

The Sunday Edition of THE WASHINGTON HERALD.

With the arrival of the vanguard of the Inauguration crowds, the attention of residents is centered on the events of the coming week. Anticipating the interest of local readers and visitors. The Washington Herald next Sunday will contain much of interest and information regarding this historical quadrennial event.

John S. Harwood will have an illustrated article on "Dramatic Incidents of Inaugurations," which will be replete with entertaining comments.

Rudolph De Zapp describes great triumphal processions of the ancients, of which Thursday's pageant will be a modern prototype.

Beginning next Sunday James B. Morrow will have a weekly letter in The Washington Herald. Mr. Morrow is well known as a character defineator, and his wide acquaintance with public men gives inm a land of information and makes his articles of value far above the average. His subject this Sunday will be the next Vice President, James Schoolcraft Sherman.

Julian Harris, son of Joel Chandler Harris, wno succeeded his father as editor of Uncle Remus' magazine, has a political dissertation on "The Solid South" which covers the subject probably better than anything which has yet been written on this danger-fraught problem. The political exigencies of the past are shown to have produced evil results, and suggestions of remedying the state of affairs are presented with a master hand.
